

Scottish delegates engages International Work at the National Delegates Conference 2012 ...

By Sam Macartney

Chair Scottish International Committee

The members of Scottish International Committee, Branch International Officers from many Scottish Branches and delegates attending UNISON National Delegates Conference this year, once again confirmed UNISON status as the union that is committed to international issues and developments. The involvement of Scottish delegates with all aspects of the international agenda helped in highlighting the work carried out in Scotland, by our activists and members.

At conference issues around the continuing struggle of the Palestinian peoples for recognition and to put an end to the injustices they have faced for decades, were debated again with a resolve that UNISON will continue to highlight the plight of Palestinian peoples.

And UNISON shall fully support the boycott and divestment strategy, as agreed by the Scottish Trade Union Congress. Also the proposal to ensure solidarity with the Palestinian General Federation of Trade Unions was fully supported too.

The conference was also committed to the on-going fight for justice by our Cuban comrades, the Miami five and their continued struggle for political recognition against the false arrest and internment in the US, Elizabeth Palmiero spoke passionately about the on-going struggle faced by the wives and families of the men, Gerardo Hernandez, Ramon Labanino, Antonio Guerrero, Fernando Gonzalez, and Rene Gonzalez who were falsely accused of espionage by the US government in 2000 and jailed in Miami, even now the families are denied regular visits to see their loved ones! THE CAMPAIGN Obama give us 5 was fully supported by the conference, more information is available from the Cuba solidarity campaign.

Carmen Mayusa a Colombian nurse and a leading trade unionist told conference of the on-going issues faced by trade unionist in her country and the fact that every three days on average one trade union activist is killed!

This she stated is the consequences the Colombian people are facing with their struggle against the capitalist government and their neo-liberalist policies', MS Mayusa received a standing ovation from conference and a pledge of continued support from Unison, this was a very moving speech and from a very brave trade unionist.

I hope my comments have enticed you to follow up some of the issues and campaigns I have referred to.

I would like to thank all the Scottish

Burma's emerging trade unions need our help...

As Burma emerges from generations of military rule, workers are building the trade union movement. They need our help! TUC Aid has just launched an appeal to help build the trade union movement in Burma, and is asking all trade unionists to donate.

For the first time in generations' workers in Burma are now free to form and join trade unions. But they are starting from scratch in a country slowly emerging from dictatorship and extreme poverty. Please help them by supporting TUC Aid's Burma

Appeal. Find out how at TUC Aid: Burma appeal

Where now on Burma?

The message from the international trade union movement, Burma Campaign and ASSK herself is to remain cautious. The UK government and the EU are softening their position and due to agree the EU 'common decision' in relation to Burma next month (April). There is an Early Day Motion (EDM 2710) that you could ask your MP to sign.

It calls for no lifting of sanctions until Burma is truly on the road to democracy <http://www.burmacampaign.org.uk/index.php/campaigns/actions/sanctions/please-write-to-your-mp> UNISON welcomes the progress that has been made in Burma over the past year but is concerned that the reforms are not yet truly progressive. We will continue to support the FTUB and FTUK, and will work with genuine independent trade unions if they are permitted to register in Burma.

UNISON will continue to work with Burma Campaign UK and support it in its campaigning work. We will also continue to lobby our own government to ensure that sanctions are not lifted prematurely.

Stop the crackdown on public service workers in Swaziland ...

Authorities fire on striking workers and refuse to reinstate those sacked. Take action! Labour Start, the online campaigning organisation, has just launched a campaign in support of sacked and striking public service workers, many of whom are members of UNISON's sister unions in the country.

Workers have been on strike since 21 June. They are demanding a pay rise of 4.5 per cent, well below the rate of inflation in Swaziland and a mere fraction of the 30 per cent pay rise that Swaziland's parliamentarians have awarded themselves.

The strikers have been met by dismissals, riot police and armed forces' intimidation and beatings, tear gas and rubber bullets. On 12 July, peacefully protesting public sector trade union members were fired upon by police – resulting in hospitalisation and injuries of at least 12 persons, some who were members of the National Public Services and Allied Workers Union (NAPSAWU) and the Swaziland Nurses Association (SNA).

Since 1 August, the government has also fired hundreds of teachers. Almost immediately, the Industrial Court of Swaziland found that those dismissals were unlawful and requested the government to withdraw the letters of dismissal issued to the teachers.

Transport workers have also been affected. Global union, the ITF, has expressed strong concerns at the arrest and detention of Bazel Tfwala, legal officer of the Swaziland Transport and Allied Workers' Union (STAWU). Simanga Shongwe, General Secretary of STAWU was also detained whilst protesting Tfwala's arrest.

UNISON has been working closely with our sister unions in Swaziland. We are supporting them in strengthening their organisations and in their campaign for multi-party democracy in Swaziland.

Please join us in condemning the governmental crackdown on Swazi public workers by sending this message to Mswati III, King of Swaziland, urging him to meet the legitimate demands of public service workers; and to ensure the immediate and unconditional reinstatement of all those who have been illegally dismissed.

UK banks and the debt crisis

To mark the 30th anniversary of the Mexican debt default back in August 1982, we've unearthed this fantastic video on British banks' role in the debt crisis. Put together in 1986 by women's video collective Cinestra as part of War on Want's pioneering campaign Profits Out of Poverty, it explains how the big four high street banks (Nat West, Barclays, Lloyds and Midland) were responsible for fuelling the debt crisis that condemned millions in Latin America to poverty. Old school and brilliant - watch and learn!

This is due to the TUC calling a national demonstration on 20 October which will see UNISON play a major part.
